

Thomas Kelsey

8/12/2005

THE OAKNOX NOTES

On Halloween Night Last year, I was staying with my grandparents. I went to bed upstairs in their home as they both stayed downstairs in the kitchen. When I woke up, they were both murdered by the Catman. The reason I know that is because in the middle of the crime scene, his cartoonish latex cat mask was laying next to the bodies. The police took the mask along with the rest of the evidence, but I remember that mask perfectly in all of its details.

I'll be looking for him this year if he returns. I'm just hoping that he's still wearing a cat mask, because he can be anything next time.

Thomas Kelsey

9/28/2005

THE OAKNOX NOTES

As Halloween approaches, I'm preparing for the man who murdered my grandparents. I've decided to become a police investigator when I grow up to keep stuff like that happening around here. I'm wondering why the police last year didn't do a whole lot last year. Based on the news articles on this guy last year, the Catman got more and more violent. He started by scaring people from the outside, to breaking a woman's kitchen window, to breaking into a family home and hiding in their kids closet, to murdering my grandparents.

My friend's younger brother Jacob had an encounter with Catman too. He told me in later November. Apparently he and his two friends Austin and Ozzie were watching the Catman tap on Austin's sliding glass door as he stared at them with his old mask smiling. Jacob said that Ozzie moved away after that night but still hangs out with Austin.

Maybe I can convince them to join me to hunt this man down.

Thomas Kelsey

10/31/2005

THE OAKNOX NOTES

Tonight is the night, Halloween night,
I'm writing this at Sparkey's Patch in Autumn Falls. A murder happened during the town's opening back in the 80's that went cold. Maybe soon it can be solved. Austin and Jacob should be here soon for a class trip.
I'll try to convince them to help me with CatMan. I know he will come back. No doubt about it. But we will see what happens.

The boys in the town sicken me. They all wearing CatMan costumes like he is a famous hero. Maybe once he is dead, everyone will take him how he should be taken. A Killing Psychopath.