TREVOR BRAUNER

FROM THE WORLD OF
HALLOWEEN NIGHT

CUPID

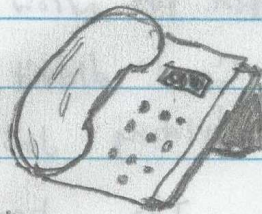

February 14th, 2005

It was Valentines Day down in Oaknox and Dolly McBride was sitting in her house, waiting for her phone to ring. She was asked out on a date by a boy at her high school, which was normal for her. Most of her classmates were always asking her to one. But this time she accepted one for Valentines Day.

The phone finally rung. Dolly immediately went to pick it up.

She listened for the voice that she spoke to earlier. But she heard nothing.

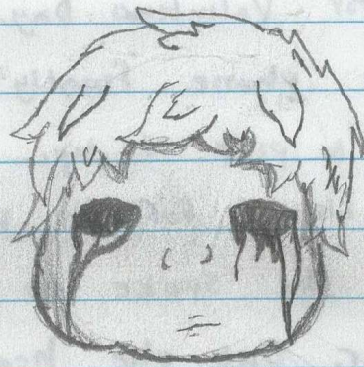

She listened for about a minute until she finally heard someone. But it didn't sound like her date. The man on the other line said one sentence.

"Happy Valentines Day..."

An arrow shot through the window and went into the floor. Dolly ducked under the counter to block herself from the debris of the shattered glass.

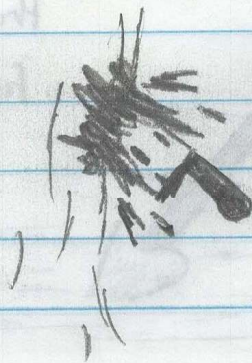

With a knife in her hand she pecked out from the side of the counter to see an arrow with a pink heart tip stuck in the floor. She was about to investigate this arrow more until a figure walked into the frame of the window. The person was wearing a cupid costume, with the eyes bleeding black. They were holding a bow, which is where the arrow came from. Cupid didn't see Dolly hiding just feet away. The heart arrow was picked out of the floor.

"Dolly. I know you here. Come on out. I'm the same man you talked to earlier."

He popped in front of her, drawing his bow at her. Dolly took her knife and drove it into the cupid's chest. Right when she did that, cupid shot her into her chest.

They sat there, not moving for a moment, gasping for breath. Cupid looked down at Dolly, tilting his head.

"It looks like we're dying together."

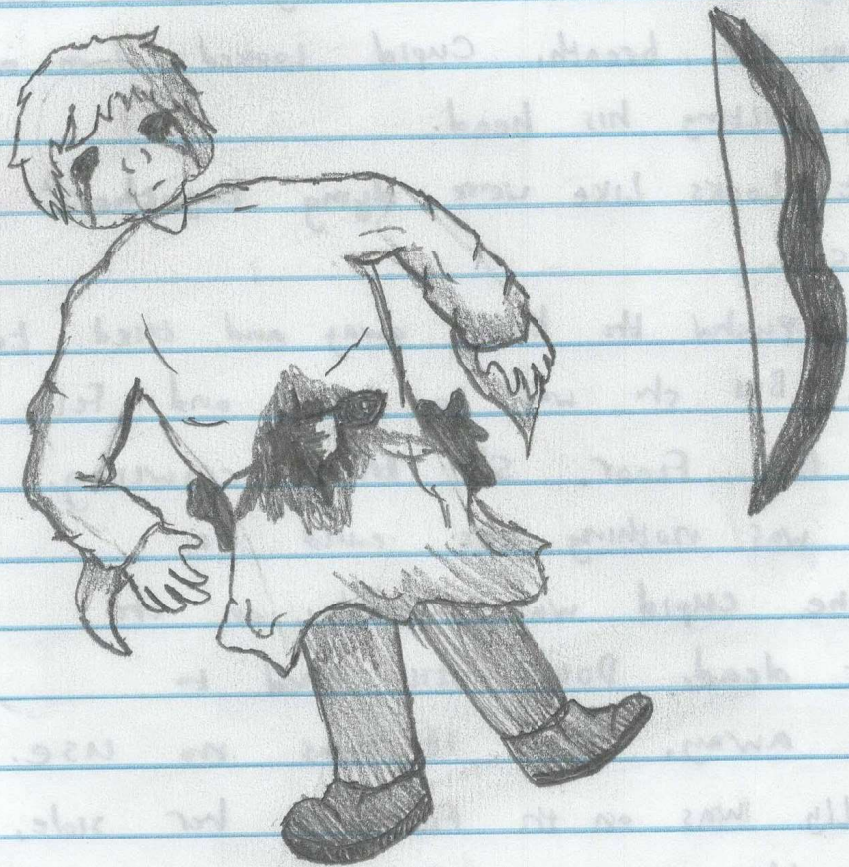

He said.

Dolly pushed the killer away and tried to run. But she was too weak and fell to the floor. She tried crawling. There was nothing she could do.

The cupid was already on the floor dead. Dolly still tried to get away. But it was no use.

Dolly was on the floor on her side, with the arrow still in her chest. She sat there with her eyes closed, waiting to die or be saved.

Cupid was identify to be Jerry Mickie. Mickie apparently was planning to kill his first date for a while then. The reason why is unknown but IF Dolly would have decised the date, she would have still been alive.
