THE BUNNYMAN
EASTER KILLER
TREVOR BRAUNER

March 27, 2005

4:37 AM.

Justina Holly woke up early on Easter morning for some strange reason. She had a weird feeling about something, but couldn't figure out what. She heard her T.V. playing from the living room. Justina walked out her room to investigate the T.V.

It was a news report from a couple weeks ago about three people that went missing in the woods with no trace of where they went. Justina was already freaking out a bit because a news story from two weeks ago was playing at four in the morning. She turned on the living room lights and pulled out the tape. The tape was titled.

"Look outside, its time for an Easter head hunt."

She looked outside into her backyard to see three large eggs, with a red liquid leaking out of them.

Justina looked back down at the tape and reread it again.

"It's time for an Easter HEAD hunt."

Fully panicking now, she ran to the phone and called the police. She explained the problem and said she was going to run across the street to her neighbors to hide.

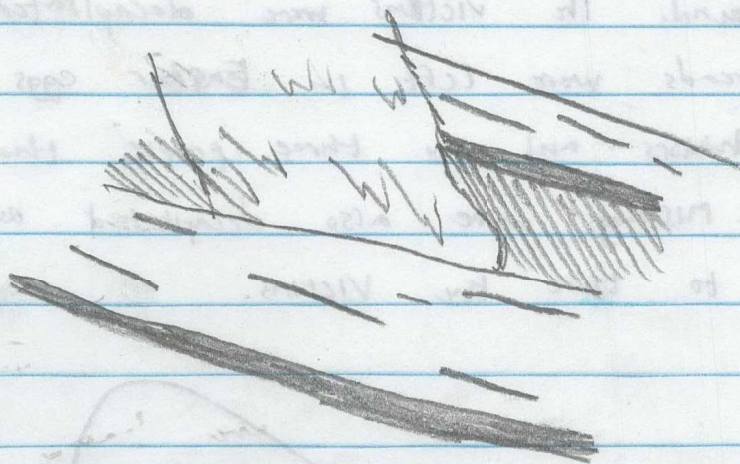

She hung up the phone and ran to the front door.

But when she opened it, she ran into someone waiting for her. It was a man in a bunny suit, covered in blood and holding a chainsaw dripping with blood. The Bunnyman pushed Justina on the floor and started fering the chainsaw. Justina got up and ran into the backyard with the Bunnyman running behind her with the chainsaw above his head. She kept running, looking behind her. But she tripped over an egg and busted it open. A decapitated head popped out of the splash of blood.

She froze in terror, not realizing the Bunnyman was about to swing at her. A bullet hit the back of the man's arm and he dropped the chainsaw. A few police officers began to chase the Bunnyman. One stopped to check on Justin while the others chased the Bunnyman hopping over fences. The chase went on to the edge of the town where a tram track laid. The Bunnyman kept running as a train was approaching. But unluckily, the foot of the costume got stuck in between the tracks.

The police had already stopped because of the oncoming train and watched the Bunnyman frantically attempt to get his foot unstuck. But it was no hope.

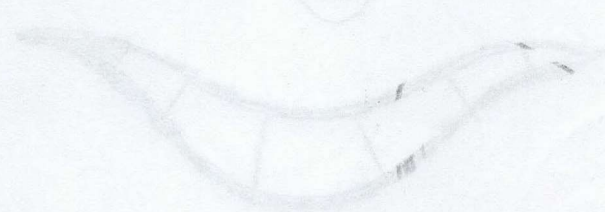

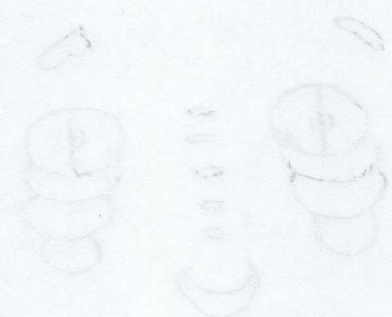

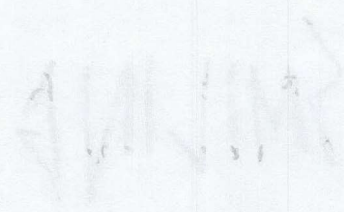

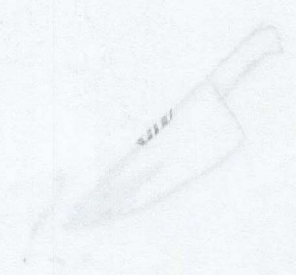

The Bunnyman exploded on impact. Officers in the area were stunned. Nobody moved until a call came on an officer's walkie talkie.

According to the officer on the other line, there were more people killed than they found. The victims were decapitated and the heads were left in Easter eggs inside their houses and the three people that went missing were also decapitated and were used to lure the victims.
