THE OAKNOX NOTES

Thomas Kelsey

5/26/06

Summertime, the only time period that feels safe in this town. It seems like nobody has a want or a feeling to kill during the summer. I don't know why, but that's just the case I guess. Everything that I've been through kind of ruined my chance of having a fun summer. Without even realizing it, I spend all my time looking over Catman and other unsolved true crime. I shouldn't, but I do. My best friend Caden Aurthor, (whos younger bro Jacob Aurthor also had encounters with Catman, one with me) keeps trying convince me to give it up. I want to listen to him, but like I said, I don't realize I do it anymore.

June 1st, 2006

Summer vacation was in full effect, everybody was out having fun, hanging out with each other, without a care in the world. Except for one. 16 year old Thomas Kelsey had gone through a lot in the recent past. That past made him go through a deep rabbit hole into discovering the truth of true crimes and serial killers. He was losing sleep more and more and just about threw away the rest of his childhood. His best friend Caden ~~Arthur~~ (older brother of Jacob Arthur) made it his summer goal to fix the problem and help him move on and enjoy the rest of the time he had as a kid.

Caden rode his bike over to Thomas' house early on the morning of June 1st. He hopped off his bike, leaving it fallen over in the yard, and knocked on the front door. While waiting for someone to answer, he looked over to the window that was installed to replace the shattered one from the previous Halloween.

Thomas opened the door, looking more tired than ever. Caden looked at his face for a moment.

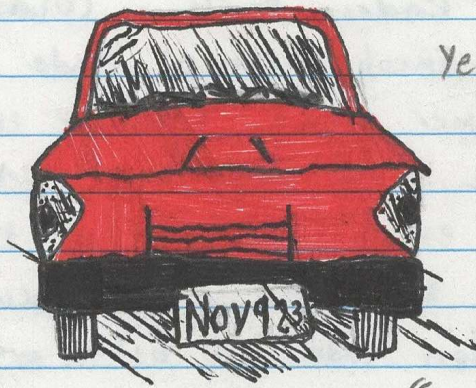

"Have you been sleeping at all?" Caden asked, concerned.

"Well, I try. But it's whatever." Thomas responded, "Anyway, what's up."

"Nothing, I just wanna hang out around town during summer. And, you know. Getting you out of that room," Caden replied.

Thomas looked past his best friend to see the morning fog.

"Uh, yeah. Alright, just let me get ready," Thomas said, then closed the door. Caden waited a few minutes as Thomas got ready to go. The garage door opened and Thomas brought his bike out. Caden brought his bike over and looked into the garage to see red truck.

"You have your license yet?" asked Caden.

"No, I'm gonna try sometime next month," Thomas responded. The boys hopped on their bikes and began riding out of the small neighborhood.

"Is there a specific plan or are we just doing whatever?" Thomas asked.

"Whatever we want to do," Caden responded.

They continued riding down town square slowly seeing more and more of the town shut down and businesses closing down. Daknox has slowly going into disrepair since 04' and on. Killer after killer after killer. Thomas even wondered why he was still living there. The kids stopped and looked around, finally taking in this almost empty town.

"Yo, Caden? When did the place become this empty?" Thomas asked.

"Probably ever since 04', half of this town's population either left from fear, or killed," Caden responded.

"I mean, look in front of us, half the town is cut off by a chain-linked fence."

The boys walked to the school zone, cutting through an alley. Someone in the town took the church to decorate a wall in there.

NEW MASK. NEW SUIT. STILL SMILING.

"Wow, they took up an entire wall, must really like this guy." Thomas said annoyed.

They walked to the school zone, a place that merged 3 buildings for elementary, middle and high school. Not like the town needed that much space for a school anymore.

The last time the school told the amount of students had was near the end of the school year. They counted around 150 students, only half came from Oaknox itself.

Near the school there was a memorial for Dolly McBride. A high schooler murdered on Valentines Day by Jerrie Mickie wearing a Cupid costume. There were a ton of memorials for citizens in Oaknox. Dolly McBride, Sally Kell, the people killed in the Redwood Trails. Caden thought in his head of all the memorials he's seen in this town. Pretty Much every Murder had a memorial, except for one.

"This place is empty and kind of sad." said Caden.
"Kind of?" Thomas responded. "The only reason this whole town isn't abandoned is because true crime people love talking and coming to this place."
"Ok, Yeah. Do you just want to go back to my place and pray GTA?" Caden asked.
"Yeah, sure. Just let me go check something real quick." Thomas responded.

The boys rode back to neighborhood and rode up to the Chain Link Fence cutting the town in two. Because of underpopulation of Oaknox, in early 2006, the fence was put up to separate the used part of town and the part that was left abandoned. Through the fence Thomas could see his grandparents old house, left to rot. No memorials. Forgotten.

About an hour later, Thomas and Caden were playing around in 'San Andreas' doing whatever they wanted. While Thomas was occupied, Caden walked out to the kitchen where Jacob was eating.

"How'd the plan go?" Asked Jacob.

"Awful. All it did was remind us how bad this place got." Caden responded.

"Then take him somewhere not in town, like Autumn Falls, everyone is there right now." Suggested Jacob.

"A murder happened there when the town opened, I feel like that would put on a whole detective raver you've seen his room." Caden responded.

"How 'bout we get him out of all of this for a day? Me and some of the others were gonna head to that nature trail and just hang out tomorrow. You know, since there's nothing to do here." Jacob explained.

"You know, that might actually work." Caden responded, "What time you guys going?"

June 2nd, 2006

"Ok, so I know yesterday didn't really work out as I intended. But this place has no reminders of anything so just don't worry about anything." Caden explained to Thomas.

The boys were already walking with the other kids with Thomas and Caden behind.

"So why have you been doing this?" Asked Thomas

"Just trying to get you to have a fun summer in some way and just make you forget about everything." Caden responded

The kids walked out of the trees to see a river rapids flowing through the forest.

"Hey guys, I've been thinking of a group name for us, now that we're all well known friends now." said Austin.

"Well what were you thinking?" asked Sophia.

"I was kinda thinking of the Oakknockers."

"Why that?" asked Jacob.

"Well because of oakknock and the fact we know each other through trick or treating, knocking on doors. So, Oakknockers." Austin explained.

"You know what. That actually kinda works." said cadem

"Yeah, Oakknockers. I definitely like that title."

Thomas added as all the kids stared at the forest.

Page 3 - Cotton Plant

The purpose of this document is to provide information regarding the cotton plant. The cotton plant is a member of the Malvaceae family and is native to the Americas. It is a woody perennial that can reach heights of up to 15 feet. The plant is characterized by its large, deeply lobed leaves and its clusters of small, tubular flowers. The flowers are typically white or light pink and are arranged in dense, terminal panicles. The cotton plant is a major source of cotton, which is one of the most important natural fibers in the world. Cotton is used in a wide variety of textile products, including clothing, bedding, and home furnishings. The cotton plant is also a source of other products, such as cottonseed oil and cottonseed meal. Cotton is a major cash crop in many developing countries, particularly in Africa, Asia, and Latin America. The cotton plant is a hardy and adaptable species that can grow in a wide range of climates and soil conditions. It is a major source of income for many farmers and is an important part of the economy of many developing countries.
